KENTUCKY FARM BUREAU FAVORS RIGID SUPPORTS

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 16. For the third straight year the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation went against the long-established policy of the American Farm Bureau Federation by voting against flexible price supports and in favor of rigid price supports at 90% of parity.

The resolution favoring 90% fixed price supports for farm products was voted at the closing session of the annual Kentucky Farm Bureau convention Wednesday. The Kentucky group has voted similar resolutions the past two years although the American Farm Bureau with which the Kentucky group is affiliated on the national level, favors flexible supports.

A resolution offered at the Kentucky meeting asking that barley tobacco acreage allotments not be cut this year was referred to the board of directors. The resolution will be considered by the board and, if it is approved, will be sent to Agriculture Secretary Benson.

Burl S. St. Clair of Fall of Rough was re-elected president of the Kentucky Farm Bureau and all other officers were re-elected.

In Oil Morgan

Mrs. Ben Cox of Pamp brought to the Courier office two radishes and a sweet pepper which she said were from second crops in her garden this year. The radishes grew from seeds that were sown by wind from her radish bed across a few rows of potatoes. She said she gathered about three dozen radishes from the second crop. The green pepper was one of several that grew on plants that already had produced one crop this season.

And... the Wild Azaleas are blooming again, for we were presented a small bouquet of them the other day.

THE COUNTY AGENT NEEDS AN AMBULANCE

Carl and Evelyn Sinclair have almost made up their minds to trade their car for an ambulance. Going to the football game at Lexington, Saturday, they were fortunate to avoid a head-on collision near Frenchburg when the car they were approaching lost control and turned over. They rushed for an ambulance. Later, on their way home they saw another head-on collision and were the first ones on the scene and rushed for an ambulance. Sunday, Carl walked to church and declared his car would stay put, but driving to Ezel in the afternoon they were coming up Grassy Hill and were the first ones to reach two soldiers turned upside down in a ditch. They rushed the boys to the West Liberty Hospital.

Core Drillers Find Evidence Of Gems In Elliott's Diamond Area

DIAMONDS may underlie this area on the Ivy Isen farm in northern Elliott county. Isen, left, stands on a Kimberlite dike (earth hatched by a volcano) while showing a visitor the spot where in 1885 a shaft was dug by diamond seekers.

Elliott County lays claim to Kentucky's only diamond mine. Geologists from London, England and Johannesburg, South Africa claim the Kimberlite found strewn on hillsides on Isen and Hamilton Creeks in northeastern Elliott county is the same formation as the famed Kimberlite diamond mines in South Africa. A London firm headed by David Draper dug a shaft at one of the Kimberlite dikes on Isen Creek in 1885 but workers stopped when they heard the earth rumbling. The Kimberlite Kimberlite Diamond Mining Company was formed in 1912 to explore the region but the First World War halted the operation since much of the capital was from England. But garnets, opals, sapphires and all sorts of other gemstones of diamonds have been picked up in quantities. On sunny days the hillsides sparkle with semi-precious stones. The diamond mine is accessible by modern roads from three directions.

Core Drills Being Used By Firm That Plans Wide Testing

A group of geologists and attorneys of Eastern Kentucky will thoroughly explore the peridotite dikes in eastern Elliott county where a formation exists similar to that in Johannesburg, South Africa, where the world famous Kimberlite diamonds are mined.

Exploration of the peridotite dikes will be by core-drilling and already one hole has been sunk to a depth of 392 feet.

Core drilling of the peridotite dikes commenced five weeks ago. The group conducting the exploration is composed of Circuit Judge John A. Keck of Sandy Hook; Coleman Hunter, geologist for the Kentucky & West Virginia Gas Corporation; Woodson Diamond of Somerset, a geologist and driller who owns the core-drilling machinery; Atty. Thomas and Jack Phillips of Ashland, and C. E. Howling of Somerset.

Site of the drilling is on Hamilton Branch near Stephens and about a quarter of a mile from the site where the Kentucky Kimberlite Diamond Mining Co. started operations in 1910. The 1910 exploration was halted by the first World War and lack of finance. The present drilling is just over the hill from Isen Creek where another group sank a shaft to a depth of 72 feet in the 1890's. Digging then was by hand, and workers stopped their digging after hearing rumblings in the earth.

Present operation is on a 400-acre tract leased from the heirs of Samuel Sellers of Baltimore. Md. Sellers' father, Matthew Sellers of Baltimore, purchased the land in the 1890's shortly after the first geological survey of the region was released.

Judge Keck obtained the lease on the 400-acre Sellers tract a few months ago, and interested others in the possibilities.

The peridotite dikes on Isen Creek and Hamilton Branch have long interested geologists and prospectors. The dikes are described by geologists to be of a formation exactly like those in the Kimberlite diamond mining (Continued on page eight)

MORGAN HI TEAM LOSES ONE AND WINS ONE GAME

Locals To Compete In MCHS Tourney At Morehead Friday

The Morgan High Blue Devils suffered their first loss of the season at Ezel last Friday night at the hands of the Ezel Rockets but jumped into the winners column again this week with a victory over Morehead High at West Liberty.

Up against a top-notch Ezel quint, the Morgan High lads just couldn't seem to find the range. Falling behind in the first period, they trailed the remainder of the game, though at one time in the final frame, the hard fighting Devils cut Ezel's lead to only 1 point.

But Ezel, behind the sharp-shooting of B. Pieratt who scored 12 points, and J. Leach and Collinsworth who scored 11 apiece, wound up at the final horn on the top side of a 46-40 score.

Big guns for West Liberty were Darrell Adams with 14 and Darrell Wheeler with 8.

Undaunted however by their loss at Ezel, Morgan came roaring back into the winners column Tuesday night when they topped Morehead High 86 to 60 at West Liberty.

Whereas in the Ezel game they couldn't seem to find the range at all, the Blue Devils poured the baskets steadily in Tuesday's encounter, scoring 50 points in the last half.

Morgan, taking an early lead behind sharpshooting center Darrell Adams who racked up 16 points in the first two frames, found themselves on the best side of a 36-22 half time score.

Coach Nickell emptied the bench in the last half, getting all his reserves into the fray.

High scorers for Morgan were Darrell Adams with 28 points, J. B. Brown with 19 and Darrell Wheeler with 14.

Hardin and Marshall led the Morehead quint with 19 and 16 respectively.

On Friday of next week Morgan county, with a 3-1 record, will journey to Morehead to compete in the Morehead Scholarship tourney.

PANEL DISCUSSES SCHOOL PROGRAM AT PTA MEETING

Legislators Asked Views On How To Finance Program

A panel composed of three members of the State Legislature and three local people representing the schools and parents discussed possible ways of financing the Minimum Foundation Program for education and how it would affect Morgan county at the monthly meeting of the West Liberty Parent-Teacher Association held in West Liberty.

Composing a panel were State Senators Everett Bach of Jackson and Ed Kelley of Flemingsburg, State Representative Lynn B. Wells of West Liberty, P.T.A. President Mrs. Marvin Ruth, Morgan County High School principal Lloyd Patterson and Warren Hopkins, local representative of the Ford Foundation Rural School Air program. Dr. Alec Spencer served as moderator. More than 150 teachers, school officials and parents attended.

Before introducing the panel members, Dr. Spencer outlined briefly the provisions of the Minimum Foundation Program and stressed the need to place it in effect promptly.

Chief interest concerned possible methods of financing the program, and the legislators were asked pointed questions if they would vote for additional taxes, local or state, to put the program in effect.

Each of the three legislators said they would not vote for requiring local school districts to increase local taxes; two said they would vote for additional state taxes if it were shown that more money was needed to put the program in effect, and the third declined to say he would vote for additional state taxes.

Senator Bach prefaced his remarks by saying that Governor-elect A. B. Chandler last week told the Eastern Kentucky Educational Association at Ashland that money to finance the program would be available next year.

During the discussion, it was brought out by Supt. Carl Stewart that Morgan county now raises $68,544 through a local school tax of $1.50 per $100 of assessed evaluation and receives $245,500 from the state. If the Minimum Foundation Program is fully financed and the county should fully qualify for its full share under the program, Morgan county would raise $43,500 through a local tax rate of $1.10 and would receive $555,000 from the program.

The additional money would be used to provide increased funds for (1) Teachers salaries; (2) Supplies and operational expenses; (3) Transportation; and (4) Maintenance of buildings.

However, before a local school district can qualify to share fully in the program, it must have sufficient school buildings to provide one class room for each 27 pupils. And the program makes no provision for financing the construction of new buildings.

Mr. Patterson noted that Morgan and other mountain counties would be affected adversely by a lack of classrooms to meet the requirements and thus may not receive their full share under the program unless funds are raised locally for buildings or the legislature appropriates funds for buildings or establishes a building fund.

At this point it was noted that the EKEA last week had enacted resolutions asking the legislature to permit local school units to raise the local school tax limit from $1.50 to $2. At present, local units can not raise additional local revenue without a vote of the people.

This brought up the question of raising more local school taxes within the county. Rev. Nevius noted that tobacco alone brought in $2,627,000 in Morgan but that the county provided only $68,000 of school money through taxes.

The moderator stated that an extra 50c tax would bring in only about $100,000 and that $250,000 was needed for new buildings. He said that if the people go out and work for a school tax with the same enthusiasm they work for candidates in an election, they would get it.

Earl Kinner, local publisher, noted that the whole purpose of the Minimum Foundation Program was to achieve equalization of educational opportunities and if it depended on voting more (Continued on page four)

THE HUNTER HOME FROM THE HILLS

When the Autumn sun is thin and the air has a crispness to it; when the leaves are leaving the trees and those left are so dry they hum a tune in the breeze; when a good hunting dog sniffs the clean air, searching for signs of quail, and makes enough racket to raise the dead when he hears a gun being cleaned and readied; when a hunting man sees, hears and smells the sights, sounds and odors of quail season—it is time to go hunting.

It is taken for granted that a hunter is after game when he takes to the hills. He may be stocking the larder with quail and rabbit for the festive board at Thanksgiving, or "saving up" for a big family meal or a Sunday dinner. But chances are, the hunter's reward far exceeds getting his daily limit. His bonus rewards are a few days in the wide open countryside with a beloved hunting dog at his side; his hunt may be taken over the hills of his childhood, which would double any pleasure he might receive from getting his game.

For many hunters it is a chance to catch up with happenings in his farmer-friend's family. Home-bound and office-bound too long, the hunter revels in showing his limit to the farmer who has allowed him to hunt over his land, and often as not, he shares his take.

Thus that pleasurable season for men—the hunting season—is near once again. It is time to stack another log on the fire, put out his slippers and have a hot supper on the table when he comes home from the hills.

SHEEP PROFITABLE

"Sheep have been profitable in Kentucky every year for more than a half a century," says a publication of the University of Kentucky Extension Service. "They have made some money during the worst depression years. Like some farms, however, some farmers are not adapted to sheep-raising. Only those farmers who like sheep and enjoy working with them should consider raising them. A farmer who is indifferent and careless in carrying out management practices will not be likely to succeed with sheep. While sheep do not require a great deal of labor, they do require attention to management details."

CHEAPER PORK?

When do we get cheaper pork? That's a common question among consumers, especially city people. They hear plenty about cheaper hogs and have begun to expect cheaper pork. Pork is cheaper, to be sure; but the price drop hardly seems to compare with the low prices farmers are taking for hogs. The rub is that the cost of slaughtering hogs, packing meat and retailing has not gone down. Much labor goes into the processing of meat, and labor is no cheaper. Haulage charges have not come down. Pork at the store may not be much cheaper, regardless of low prices for hogs.

MORGAN NATIVE RECORDS SONGS

Garrett Williams, who was a member of the Morgan County high school graduating class last May, has written two songs which have been recorded on records by the Miami Valley Recording Studios in Dayton, Ohio.

Williams, who is 19, is employed in Dayton by the National Cash Register Co.

For recording, Garrett sang one of his songs, "It's All Over Now." And he and his brother, Delmar Williams, sang the other song, entitled "The Last Love Letter."

They are sons of Mrs. Laura Williams of Florissant and the late Clay Williams.

While a student at Morgan County high school, Garrett wrote many poems and songs which his teachers praised highly. But he declined to have any published.

However, in the 4-H Club Talent Contest here last March he and Miss Paula Hamilton won a prize for singing a duet and they later sang over the radio station at Morehead.

GREAR—TOBACCO, CORN ORDER OF DAY

GREAR, Ky., Nov. 15—(By Kenneth Jones)—The tobacco-stripping season is now here, and most of the farmers in the community are taking advantage of this fact. Most of them have started stripping on some of their crop, and a few have completed theirs. Carl Havens is among these few. Almost all farmers are gathering in their year's harvest of corn, or have already gathered it. All the crops this year at Grear are plentiful and of good quality. We have much to be thankful for as this Thanksgiving season draws near.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Peyton and sons Terry and Gary from Cincinnati, along with Rex Peyton, were visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Ed Peyton here over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Saunders of Trenton, Ohio, came to take back their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Prater, to stay at their home for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jones, Mrs. Myrtle Havens, Mrs. Mabel Evans, Maria Reed, Dale Jones, Larry Evans, and Kenneth Jones were at Natural Bridge Sunday afternoon.

The saw mill here, which has a large volume of business, has expanded its facilities to meet its growing requirements. A large well has been drilled to provide water for washing of the logs. The mill also offers employment for several local people.

Everyone in this community was very pleased at the outcome of the election. In fact, Grear was very "Happy" all the way.

Volney Green of Cleveland, O., visited his brother Noah Grear here last week. Mr. Grear was calling on his old neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Lennell Jones, Wednesday evening. Mr. Grear's former home was the residence which now belongs to the Norman Stacy family.

A medium-sized fire broke out on the farm of H. S. Williams Wednesday afternoon. Farmers met and quickly extinguished it, fearing that it would spread to nearby farms.

Bronson Barker who is employed at Middletown, Ohio, was here at his home over the week end.

Mrs. Lula Bailey says that her son William has returned for the fall semester at the University of Illinois. Bailey had a large campus wedding when he married the former Janet Briggs of Champaign, Ill.

Unofficial reports from all precincts in the state show that A. B. Chandler, Democrat, received a majority of 131,353 votes over Republican Edwin E. Denney in the Nov. 8 election.

Majorities of Democrat candidates for the other state offices were even larger than Chandler's. Harry Lee Waterfield was elected Lieutenant Governor by a majority of over 150,000. Robert Martin was elected State Superintendent by a majority of approximately 150,000, and Henry E. Carter of West Liberty was elected State Treasurer by a majority of nearly 150,000.

Dems Ahead In GOP Areas

The Democrats showed surprising strength in two races in predominantly Republican areas. In one of them, for the seat of the Court of Appeals in the 7th district vacated by Bert T. Combs, Judge Astor Hogg, incumbent Democrat of Harlan, piled up a 17,221-vote lead over Robert E. Bird (R) of London. Hogg is serving on the court by appointment. Vote was from 943 of the district's 1,064 precincts.

SCHOOL FUNDS

Local taxes within a county, equalization could not be achieved since the poorer counties would continue to have inadequate school buildings while the richer counties would have adequate buildings. He said additional school buildings should be provided for on a state-wide basis and pointed to the present state school equalization fund and the state 2-cent gasoline tax for building rural roads as well established precedents for this proposal, rather than asking counties to vote more local taxes.

The legislators then were asked if they would favor a plan to let counties vote additional local revenue. All three legislators said they would oppose such a proposal.

Supt. Stewart said the state should establish a state school building fund, noting that some counties could not finance building of more buildings.

When it was pointed out that a federal bill to aid education would be introduced in Congress in January providing for building more class rooms to be paid for by the federal and state governments on a 50-50 basis, each legislator said he would vote to establish a state fund to match federal money. Senator Kelley, however, qualified his statement by adding "if state money is available."

Each legislator on the panel said he was fully in favor of placing the Minimum Foundation Program in effect, and Rep Wells said "if there is not sufficient state funds I am in favor of a special session of the Legislature to pass a tax measure to finance it." However, he said he did not have any particular type of tax in mind.

Regarding a tax, Senator Bach said, "I don't know how we can enact more taxes and uphold the campaign pledges of both candidates for Governor. What would be the use to pass an extra tax if the Governor is pledged to veto it?" he asked.

Senator Kelley said the word "tax" is outstated.

When the audience was asked if they would back up legislators in voting additional state taxes they applauded.

CLUB TO SPONSOR HOLIDAY CONTEST

The Morgan County Woman's Club meeting in the Fellowship Hall of the Christian church last Thursday night was challenged by its speaker, Rev. James Norsworthy, minister of the Methodist church, to develop a more spiritual life.

Mr. Norsworthy listed Reverence, Modesty, Gentleness, Purity, Friendliness and Endurance as values needed in acquiring a Christlikeness.

The program was under the direction of Mrs. W. H. Wells, Spiritual Values Chairman. Mrs. Wells spoke briefly on the duties of the committee. Mrs. J. C. Nickell led the devotional. Mrs. Mark Davis reviewed an article from the August issue of Reader's Digest, "Power of Prayer."

Rev. and Mrs. Robert McClure were notified last week of the death of an old friend, Henry Lewman of Tollesboro. He was 103 years old. He served Rev. McClure there as his pastor 37 years ago. At that time Mr. Lewman was Sunday school superintendent, song director and deacon of the Methodist church there.

THE LUCK OF the Irish is with you today, my friends. For this day only you can read in this fine newspaper my verbal meanderings concerning barnyard science. Ordinarily, the astounding manifestations of hindsight which I daily pour into GREETINGS are published only in that remarkable newspaper, The Courier-Journal, of Louisville, Kentucky.

THESE MANIFESTATIONS are taken directly from strange markings on my incomparable collection of terrapin backs. To my knowledge I am the only columnist in the English-speaking world who can decipher the monumental messages hidden in these crawling cryptograms. That is why I have never claimed that GREETINGS is anything but bad some days and worse on others.

YOU CAN FIND Greetings in the upper left hand corner of The Courier-Journal comic page. It runs under what we in the newspaper business call a "stock head."

This shows we were not behind the doors when the sense was passed out. In no other place can you find learned discussions of such stock problems as why a red cow eats green grass, then gives white milk and yellow butter.

MY SUCCESSFUL practice of barnyard therapeutics is the envy of other newspapers. Are you threatened with dead rheumatism? Write me, and I will send you a buckeye to ward it off.

Do the vicissitudes of life seem to close in around you? Upon application, I will send you a packet of rabbit tobacco, whose pungent but everlasting aroma will restore you. No other newspaper, to my knowledge, is staffed and equipped to render such free and postpaid service.

IT IS TRUE that some reporters develop into columnists from force of circumstances or lack of character. But do not let that scare you away from my column. It is not a one-horse project. While I stand in the sagging middle and fight knot-headed critics, one end is propped up by my fearless poets and the other end by my intrepid investigators.

MAN AND BOY, I have been in the newspaper business for 37 years. Experience has taught me, if anything, that a well-balanced paper needs one feature which readers can skip and not be hurt. That is a fundamental reason why The Courier-Journal runs my column. You can miss it one day, or several days hand-running, and not be any worse off. I am by it, therefore, a lot like the bass drummer was by his music. "You don't make very good music," a critic said to the drummer. "No," the drummer replied, "but I drown out a lot of bad."

THANK YOU, friends, and remember—you can read my column and still wonder which side is right.

Burley Stripping In Full Swing In Morgan Co. Now

Only about 5% of Morgan's burley crop has been hauled to warehouses, thus far but stripping is in full swing throughout the county following the light rains Monday and Tuesday that brought the leaf into case.

Morgan's burley crop this year is a little light and leaves are shorter. But the crop is of excellent quality and has cured excellently, County Agent Carl Sinclair states. The color is excellent and Morgan burley should command premium prices this season, most observers predict.

POET WRITES OF THANKSGIVING

(By Nora Easterling)

When we see a yellow pumpkin laying by a shock of corn, And a great big row of turkeys Going by the farmer's barn, Then we all begin a thinking Of a day that's coming 'round. When Grandpa gets his sharpened ax And out he goes without a sound.

Grandma gathers in a pumpkin. To the kitchen she arrives. But, for pecking, oh, no never, Grandma likes a nice surprise. Grandpa gets the largest turkey. Whacks off his head and brings him in.

Then they do the Turkey dressing. And the cooking will begin. With the children and their children.

Home coming for this special day. Will be gathered round the table. In a special kind of way. Every head will bow so humble. While we thank our Lord above For His richest blessings ever.

"But, why pumpkin pie and turkey?" In surprise we hear them say; Then Grandpa and Ma will answer: "Why, this is Thanksgiving day."

The Golden Leaf

Tobacco grading is now in full swing in the hills of Morgan county. We find that our tobacco is light and very lively, and has cured out very beautiful from bottom to the very top leaf. Most of our flyers are so long they look a lot like lugs. Most tobacco has a golden color, which may mean we will receive a good price for our leaf crop this year. Most farmers are trying to get, at least, one crop ready for the first market.

Hello To A Friend

Mrs. Grace Templeton, Honey, how well I remember when you were a Florress correspondent to the Courier and I was writing from Lenox. You seem like a close relative. When I was at Centerville I asked one of your neighbors about you. When you pass Honeymoon Holar again, I hope you will decide on coming up. The last time I remember you being up this way was several years ago when you and Beulah Bolin walked up in ankle length dresses. Beulah was singing the most beautiful song. I was glad to read about your brother Jim's son being Mayor of the City of Lebanon, Ohio.

Florress Native Injured

Your writer received word that her sister, Mrs. Phoebe Elam formerly from Florress, was hit by a bus as she was on her way to work in Cincinnati. She reports she is in a hospital there, but hopes to be able to work again in two weeks. Phoebe says she reads Florress news.

Pvt. Darrell G. Williams, stationed in New Mexico, writes he likes out there but fine. He thinks it is the nicest Army base anywhere and is more like a college dormitory than an Army installation. Henry Clay Hauey said he was stationed not far from where Darrell is when he was in service.

A CORRECTION: Mrs. Naomi Conley was 86 years of age Nov. 6. James C. Conley went to Salersville to Dr. Hall Sunday. He

FOR Gay, Carefree LIVING

THERE'S something about this lovely home that suggests gay, carefree living — a brightly colored stone patio leading off the dining room, plantings bordering its unique stone and vertical siding exterior, a TV room that is virtually enclosed in glass, and stone bordered plantings flanking the living room stairway. What a truly gay setting for family life! The plan is split-level, but actually with three levels. First level is the cellar, where the heating equipment is located, laundry and recreation room. A short flight up leads to living, dining rooms and kitchen. Another short flight up brings you to the bedrooms. All told there are three bedrooms and a study, which can also be converted into a fourth bedroom if desired. There are two full baths to serve the family, and a full dining room in addition to extra breakfast space in the unusually large kitchen. There's space for everyone and everything in this excellent plan, space for work and play and just ordinary living. Note, too, the large fireplace in both living room and TV room, and double garage on basement level. A study plan of this house is available to readers free. Simply send 25¢ to cover mailing and handling to Modern Plan Service, Dept. F, Lincoln Bldg., Mt. Vernon, N.Y.

DIAMOND MINE

area of South Africa. They were caused by molten lava forced up from the bowels of the earth by a volcano which only partly erupted. Three such dikes are shown on geological maps.

Members of the new firm said this week they planned to drill a number of holes on each dike on the Sellers tract. They said they plan to thoroughly explore the peculiar minerals in the dikes. All cores from the drilling are being preserved. Samples from the cores are being sent to an assay laboratory in the East for complete analysis.

A second core-drilling machine will be brought into Elliott county in a few days to commence drilling a second hole.

Courier-Journal Story

The following description of the diamond exploration project in Elliott was published in Sunday's Courier-Journal and was written by Gerald Griffin, manager of the paper's Eastern Kentucky Bureau.

By GERALD GRIFFIN

Courier-Journal East Ky. Bureau
SANDY HOOK, Ky., Nov. 12—Perhaps there's no gold in them thar hills. The hills around here, that is.

But there's a good chance that there's something even more valuable—such as diamonds.

Already minute particles, apparently diamonds, have been brought to the surface. And so have many small red stones said to be garnets.

And, strangely enough, the name of the geologist in charge of the core-drilling operation is Diamond. Woodson Diamond, he is.

The drilling for gems is in Elliott County, financed by people there, including Circuit Judge John Keek, former State highway commissioner.

Down 300 Feet

Now down to about 300 feet, the drillers think they may have something. At least they have some evidence.

The place where they are drilling looks as if it might be the crater of an extinct volcano. It is a saucer-shaped valley rimmed all around with hills. And there's Kimberlite there. That's the geological structure in which diamonds occur.

Possibilities of this gem-bearing area have been known for more than half a century, but it never has been exploited, never drilled. Here is what the geologist, who is living in a trailer at the drilling, has to say about it:

"So far as is known at present, the only occurrence of Kimberlite outside of the southern portion of Africa is in Elliott County, East Kentucky.

Similarity 'Remarkable'

"In the region lying between Ison's and Creech's Creek is an area in which Kimberlite, identical with that contained in the South African 'pipes,' has been discovered. In both the general mass, as well as the accessory material and foreign inclusions, there is the most remarkable similarity with the South African Kimberlite. So much so that it is impossible to distinguish the Kentucky mineral from that of the South African 'pipes.' Not only are similar minerals to be found therein but they occur in a distinctly similar manner.

"Every special characteristic of the South African mineral can be duplicated abundantly in the Kentucky Kimberlite."

Continuing his report on "The Kentucky Kimberlite Pipes," the geologist says:

"The garnets, ilmenite, olivine, diopside and mica occur in the same form, and show the distinct kelyphite rings so characteristic of the South African occurrences. The included masses of foreign rocks are similar in composition and form.

"The weathering of the mineral is the same and the crater-like mode of occurrence of the pipes is identical."

All of this seems to indicate that Elliott County might come up with its own Kimberley diamond field.

And here's something else the geologist reported:

"From personal examination of the occurrence of Kimberlite in the area described in Kentucky, this writer has no hesitation in stating that the mineral matter filling the craters near Ison's Creek is identical in every detail with that occurring in the 'pipes' of South Africa. And further, that the craters are similar in structure and contain the same accessory minerals and included masses as those in which diamonds are found so abundantly in the Kimberley and Pretoria Districts (in Africa).

"So far," Diamond reported, "there is only legendary evidence of the occurrence of diamonds in this spot (Elliott County), yet the fact must not be overlooked that though the Transvaal possesses the richest diamond mine in the world, for over 35 years the existence of diamonds in the Transvaal was as legendary as that of the Kentucky diamonds at present."

Great Skill Shown

The geologist went on to report: "That this should have occurred in a country where thousands of prospectors all keen on the discovery of a diamond mine, were pursuing their investigations with great skill and patience demonstrates that it is quite possible that payable diamond mines may exist in Elliott County, Kentucky.

tucky, where probably no single resident is sufficiently acquainted with the occurrence or characteristic of a diamond to enable him to identify a stone which he might pick up."

In 1903, the Kimberlite outcropping in Elliott County attracted the attention of David Draper, a geologist from the South African diamond fields.

After investigating the Kentucky Kimberlite occurrences, the Johannesburg geologist concluded: "I have not come across a more favorable locality for cheap working and in which an immense quantity of decomposed mineral could be mined and treated in order to test its value as a diamond producer."

Finally, he wrote: "I may be allowed to state that a similar occurrence of Kimberlite had been discovered in South Africa, no expense would have been spared in order to prove the existence of diamonds in payable quantities.

"No one can say definitely that diamonds will be found in payable quantities in the Kentucky Kimberlite, but my opinion is that this occurrence of mineral identical to that contained in the South African diamond-bearing pipes is worthy of an exhaustive test and I hereby recommend it to the favorable consideration of the public of the United States of America."

It has been 52 years since David Draper made his report and only now are people getting around to find out for certain if there's diamonds in them thar hills.

Prof. P. C. Emrath, of the University of Kentucky College of Engineering, investigated the Elliott County site in 1941 and reported:

"No conclusive evidence exists as to either the presence or entire absence of diamonds in the occurrence."

"The presence, in portions of the occurrence, of garnet and olivine of economic value is a known fact."

"Evidence of the presence of chromite has been established, but not to any useful degree in an economic sense."

"Some exploration and working on the site has been carried on in previous years, but usually complete records of all this work, particularly the results of working, do not now exist. A volume of folklore and legend has grown up about the circumstances that is misleading and erroneous, for the most part."
